02 / Original interview - formalized answers

Q1. What do you want to be known for, and what should people understand when they discover your work?

Yassin wants to be recognized for the ability to produce exceptionally high-quality cinematic advertising videos. The work should encourage brand decision-makers to imagine how their own products could be presented through his creative approach. He wants commercials to attract attention and engagement, potentially supporting client sales; for everyday viewers, the intended reaction is amazement at the visuals.

Clarification: Of the possible positioning directions, his first priority is cinematic video quality. Engagement and sales are desired client outcomes, not proven performance claims.

Q2. Who is your ideal client, and which industries or brands would you most like to work with?

His preferred industries are jewelry, accessories, and fragrances/perfumes, where he believes his capabilities are particularly well matched. He sees his ideal clients as medium-sized brands that aspire to or already occupy a premium market position. Names he cited as reference or aspirational brands include Glamour, Swarovski, and Afnan.

Clarification: These brand names are examples of the clients or aesthetics he is interested in, not a claim that he has worked with them. Geographic target markets have not been confirmed.

Q3. Which services do you want to prioritize?

His first priority is AI visual production. Blender-based 3D animation is an additional capability. His process is flexible and depends on the client brief, but he indicated that most projects are executed primarily with AI tools.

Clarification: Do not market every deliverable as a fixed AI-plus-3D hybrid workflow; the method varies according to project requirements.

Q4. What differentiates your work from other creators?

Yassin identified storytelling instincts, the ability to draw creative inspiration from song lyrics, integration of AI and 3D methods when useful, cinematic execution, and rapid production as strengths. Standard projects may take around one to three days. He indicated that advertisements longer than 1 minute 30 seconds can take as long as four days.

Clarification: Treat timing as an estimate, not a blanket delivery guarantee. Scope, complexity, client approvals, and revisions may change delivery time.

Q5. How would you describe the personality you want your brand to communicate?

He supplied ratings on seven opposing personality scales, using 1 as the left-hand trait and 5 as the right-hand trait. His first rating was approximately 3-4. He later confirmed that the same overall personality and visual identity should apply across his website and other brand materials.

Minimal (1) / Experimental (5)	3-4: balanced, leaning experimental
Luxury (1) / Accessible (5)	1: strongly luxury-oriented
Serious (1) / Playful (5)	1: strongly serious/professional
Artistic (1) / Commercial (5)	2: leaning artistic
Futuristic (1) / Timeless (5)	2: leaning futuristic
Bold (1) / Subtle (5)	2: leaning bold
Technical (1) / Emotional (5)	4: leaning emotional

Interpretation (not a direct quote): premium, cinematic, serious/professional, artistic, bold, slightly experimental, and emotionally engaging. Translate these traits into rules only after visual-reference review.

Q6. Which artists, studios, or websites inspire your creative and visual preferences?

He cited three Instagram accounts: Buck the Aikami for professional AI visual production; El Sner for 3D inspiration; and Seif Hussam 3D for work combining 3D and AI. The specific design elements he wants to borrow from each reference have not yet been separately annotated.

Q7. Which of your own projects best demonstrate your work and future creative direction?

Yassin provided four examples highlighting different skills, then ranked them in this order of preference: (1) storytelling, (2) rich visual presentation, (3) AI skills, and (4) 3D skills. Although his top-ranked example demonstrates storytelling, he clarified that for commercial product advertising he usually prefers cinematic presentation of a product's beauty over a narrative-heavy advertisement.

1 - Storytelling	https://www.instagram.com/p/DccZd0FC_sw/
2 - Rich visuals	https://www.instagram.com/p/Dd1jFvkC4f5/
3 - AI skills	https://www.instagram.com/p/DcPFbz2RSby/
4 - 3D skills	https://www.instagram.com/p/DY7eKPvCkna/

The term "rich" is preserved from his original description; its precise meaning should be confirmed during the visual audit. Project links are client-provided and were not independently evaluated in this report.

Q8. What creative directions, subjects, or project types do you prefer to avoid?

Yassin does not wish to accept projects promoting smoking, vaping, alcoholic beverages, or comparable categories that conflict with his personal principles. These are professional project-selection boundaries and should inform internal lead qualification.

Clarification: His initial wording was broader and ambiguous; this later category-based clarification is used rather than interpreting him as rejecting all non-religious content. Additional categories can be clarified case by case.

Q9. What is the main goal of your website, and how should interested clients contact you?

The website should convert interested visitors into conversations about potential freelance engagements, ultimately helping Yassin attract more clients and higher-budget projects. His preferred first-contact channel is WhatsApp. Before discussing a project, he wants to understand the product, the client's vision and perception of it, reference material, the available budget, and the intended goal of the video.

Clarification: Proposed primary CTA: "Discuss Your Project" linking to WhatsApp. This wording is a recommendation, not an approved final line.

Q10. Where should the brand system be used beyond the website, and what is the order of priority?

Yassin ranked brand applications using 1 as the highest priority. The portfolio website is first, Instagram second, and project case studies fourth. Position three was not specified. He confirmed this ranking scale.

1	Portfolio website
2	Instagram
3	Unspecified - no item supplied
4	Project case studies
5	PDF portfolio
6	Client pitch presentations
7	Proposals
8	Showreels
9	Video title cards
10	Social media graphics

03 / Additional business clarifications

Long-term business structure

Yassin currently presents himself as an individual creative professional. He would consider collaborating with or building a team if demand and project volume increased; he is not committed to remaining a solo freelancer indefinitely.

Definition of success

His two stated success outcomes are (1) acquiring more clients and (2) increasing the budgets he can command for projects. The project should support stronger positioning, portfolio credibility, and a clear contact pathway. No numerical targets or baseline metrics have been provided.

Cross-channel alignment

He specifically wants the website, portfolio, presentations, and other brand touchpoints to express the same visual language and brand personality, while layouts adapt appropriately to each medium.

04 / Preliminary strategic direction - proposed, not yet approved

Draft positioning statement

Yassin Omran creates high-quality cinematic product advertisements for premium-positioned brands, using AI-led production and 3D expertise to present products with visual impact.

Draft brand principles

Product beauty first. Make the product the focal point. Cinematic craft. Prioritize composition, lighting, atmosphere, and finish. Professional confidence. Show restraint and precision without hiding artistic ambition. Consistent recognition. Use a repeatable brand language across channels. Client clarity. Make services, examples, and inquiry steps easy to understand.

Design hypotheses to test during research

A premium, cinematic portfolio may benefit from carefully controlled typography, thoughtful spacing, strong work samples, and unobtrusive navigation. Dark backgrounds, experimental transitions, and other visual treatments must remain options to test against Yassin's examples and preferences; they are not finalized identity choices.

Website conversion hypothesis

Lead with selected cinematic projects and a clear service description. Add a high-visibility WhatsApp project inquiry route, ideally encouraging the visitor to share product details, vision, references, budget, and objective. Do not publish unverified metrics, client logos, or outcomes.

05 / Known unknowns and working assumptions

Priority #3	No application was provided; leave the rank blank until Yassin identifies one or deliberately removes it.
Geographic focus	Egypt, Gulf markets, and international targets were raised as possibilities but not selected.
Brand references	Need annotated screenshots and notes about typography, motion, layouts, and specific liked features.
Portfolio rights	Confirm whether each showcased project can be publicly used and what Yassin contributed.
Service pricing	No verified budget minimum, pricing tiers, or project scope definitions yet.
Production claims	1-4-day figures are self-reported estimates, not service-level guarantees.
Success measurement	Need baseline inquiries, deal sizes, and a realistic tracking period before setting numeric KPIs.

06 / Phase 1 sign-off and transition

Phase 1 status: discovery answers and key clarification questions are sufficiently resolved to proceed to asset collection and portfolio audit. Proposed positioning, creative principles, and visual choices still need evidence-based testing and client approval in subsequent phases.

Next action: gather original project assets and business materials; create an asset register and portfolio audit; annotate references; then present a Brand Foundation draft for explicit approval before choosing visual identity tokens.
